DATA SETS

NATIONALLY REPRESENTATIVE SURVEY OF PAKISTANIS' MEDIA CONSUMPTION AND BELIEFS ABOUT GOVERNANCE, POLITICS, TERRORISM: 2012

January 1, 2012 through January 1, 2015. Working with Karl Kaltenthaler and Will Miller, we have secured funding from the U.S. State Department to field a survey among 7,600 Pakistanis. In addition to consulting with the client to help ensure that we received this $325,000 grant, my role in this effort involves developing hypotheses to test, instrument design and verification, quality assurance on the Urdu translations, training of the enumerators in Urdu, evaluating and comparing completed forms in Urdu to the soft-copy of the data to look for irregularities or signs of malfeasance, contributing to analysis of the data to address the team's hypotheses and drafting client-oriented as well as scholarly papers.

NATIONALLY REPRESENTATIVE SURVEY OF PAKISTANIS: 2011-2012

January 1, 2011 through January 1, 2012. Working with Shapiro and Malhotra, I have secured funding from the U.S. State Department to field a survey among 16,000 Pakistanis (inclusive of the tribal areas and the four main provinces as well as an over sample of the flood basin). Our team will again use our information cue endorsement experiment to cast light upon why some Pakistanis support some militant groups and their actions. We will also explore specific issues relevant to the tribal areas and the areas most deeply affected by the 2010 monsoon-related flood. Apart from handling the business aspects of the contract and human subjects procedures, I will again be involved in survey design and translation, enumerator training and final instrument quality control as well as data analysis, interpretation and exposition of our findings.

BFRS POLITICAL VIOLENCE IN PAKISTAN DATASET

Working with co-principal investigators Ethan Bueno de Mesquita, Rasul Bakhsh Rais, and Jacob N. Shapiro, developed a codebook and coding procedures for extracting data on Pakistani political violence between January 1988 and December 2010, based upon Pakistani press reporting in The Dawn. This main effort was based at the Lahore University of Management Sciences in Pakistan. Working with Jenna Jordan, I helped establish and train a team at the University of Chicago to code a reliability sample using the same newspaper. In addition, I identified several Urdu language coders who coded a reliability sample from the Urdu press under the supervision of Jenna Jordan. This enabled us to discern the differences in English and Urdu-media coding. Research was supported by: the International Growth Centre, the Office of Naval Research, and the National Center for Risk and Economic Analysis of Terrorism Events (CREATE), at the University of Southern California, sponsored by United States Department of Homeland Security.

NATIONALLY REPRESENTATIVE SURVEY OF PAKISTANIS: 2009

December 2009- May 2009. In collaboration with Jacob N. Shapiro (Princeton) and Neil Malhotra (then Stanford, now the University of Pennsylvania), I helped field a survey among 6,000 Pakistanis from a nationally-representative sample using a novel endorsement experiment designed by Malhotra. I oversaw survey instrument design (with technical collaboration from Shapiro and Malhotra) and translation. Shapiro and I also trained the enumerators in Pakistan and performed overall quality control on the final instrument prior to be fielding. I also contributed to the data analysis, interpretation and exposition. This survey aimed to test a series of hypotheses about why some Pakistanis support specific militant groups and/or their actions.

NATIONALLY REPRESENTATIVE SURVEY OF URBAN PAKISTANIS: 2007

May through October 2007. While at USIP I oversaw and funded the fielding of a survey of some 900 Pakistanis, including questionnaire design and translation and data analysis and exposition. This work was done in collaboration with the Program on International Policy Attitudes and AC Nielson Pakistan. This survey aimed to collect information about who supports militancy and why, views towards several of the state's domestic and foreign policies, attitudes towards democracy and governance, among other issues.

NATIONALLY REPRESENTATIVE SURVEY OF IRANIANS: 2006

July through December 2006. While at USIP, I oversaw and funded the fielding of a first-ever, nationally-representative survey of 1,000 Iranians using face to face interviews covering popular views towards Iran's nuclear program as well as a suite of other domestic and foreign policies. To do this, I contracted working partnerships with the Program on International Policy Attitudes and Search for Common Ground as well as an Iranian firm which has requested to remain anonymous.

CONVENIENCE SAMPLE OF PAKISTANI MILITANT FAMILIES: 2004

May-December 2004. While at USIP, I designed and oversaw a survey of families of slain militants across Pakistan using militant organizations' self-reports of their slain fighters. This effort culminated in a data set of 120 households. This was a plausibility probe to demonstrate that such surveys can be conducted safely. Our analysis focused upon finding variation within militant households.

MISCELLANEOUS SURVEYS: BANGLADESH (2010); PAKISTAN (2009); KASHMIR (2008)

In addition, I have collaborated with the Program on Policy Attitudes on a variety of other surveys fielded in Bangladesh, Pakistan as well as in both Indian and Pakistani-administered Kashmirs. My roles in those surveys varied from consultation on instrument development, question phraseology, subject matter expertise, data analysis and interpretation, as well as drafting and presenting public analysis of the same.
